ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A hollow animal-shaped structure having an entrance into which a child may crawl to take a nap. The structure may have a swinging door at the entrance, which is located at the mouth or chest of the animal. The structure may have a padded floor for the safety and comfort of the child. The structure may be equipped with an independent source of electrical current to enable its eyes to light up and to enable the animal to play back a recorded sound of that animal.
